DEDICATION

O University of Mississippi men in the military service of the country who, true to the teachings of chivalric forbears for generations gone, and with devoted loyalty to the patriotic principles taught them as students here, have championed the cause of honor, home and humanity, and, while the world is at war and crises hasten, are battling for broader brotherhood and larger liberty among the nations of earth, this book is affectionately dedicated by their brothers, confident that they will add new glory to the already noble history of this beloved institution.

FOREWORD

IN PLANNING the Ole Miss of '18 we have not only endeavored to embody in it those things most representative of the University life and those things most likely to be cherished in the memory of after years, but we have also tried to make it a symbol of the remarkable development of fellowship and university spirit, for which this year's student body must be congratulated. ¶ If we have pleased in any respect and therefore deserve credit, we suggest that it be divided and a liberal portion extended to the eighty-five seniors who made possible the publication of the Ole Miss of '18.

“Ole Miss” to Her Sons in Khaki

So good-bye! The luring mem'ry of the honeysuckle
Blooming by the footbridge oft shall call you back;
Dusk and dark and dawn and day be filled with longing
For the fellows, campus, classroom, field and track.

So good-bye! Before your face the world is lying,
Torn and soiled and blurred with many tears;
Ah! You'll long to be again a student,
Free from cares and dangers, wants and fears.

Still, when Honor calls, you question not, but answer;
And the highest Duty's calling now, 'tis true;
Yet above the shot and shell and shrapnel,
You'll be hearing songs your comrades never knew.

Songs that drip their wordless music o'er the sunlit
Days and starry nights of each remembered scene;
Souvenirs so fragile you would hardly think they'd
Span the many days and miles that intervene!

But good-bye! You have your Alma Mater's blessing;
And you wear her Cross of Honor on your breast;
She consigns it to your keeping, and your keeping
She consigns to Him who doeth all things best!

KATHLEEN BALDWIN, '17.

“OLE MISS”

Le Prix

Today can only be from yesterday;
The flower must die to yield the seed;
Deserved fame is the offspring of toil,
And painless peace and rest the sufferer's meed.

We purchase laughter with eventual tears;
And heap up sadness with each breath
Of joy; buy knowledge with the pain of years,
And give our lives to know the mystery of Death.

Commemoration

LIFE is a river. We can only tell of some of its wanderings in the past, and only judge that in the future its course will be that of a wandering stream. The starting of this river was once a laughing uplet, and we can well remember the playful murmuring of that little brook and the winding of its grassy and flowery borders when we in childhood played upon the banks or mirrored our little faces in its silvery bosom. How delightful the scenes of childhood. The trees extended above our youthful heads, the benediction of rich blossoms and held within reach of our tiny hands the beautiful gift of their rich foliage. The sun, too, remembered us and cast about us his golden beams, at once revealing ten thousand miniature rainbows of promise in the tinkling dewdrops or painting the delicate shades of a blushing rose or a modest violet. The choristers of the wildwood vied with each other in smelling the glorious anthems of nature filling our hearts with strains of harmony enriched by the thrilling of a thousand notes which today are but the last chords of yesterday. But this much we know, our boat is gliding onward upon the swiftly flowing surface of life's stream.

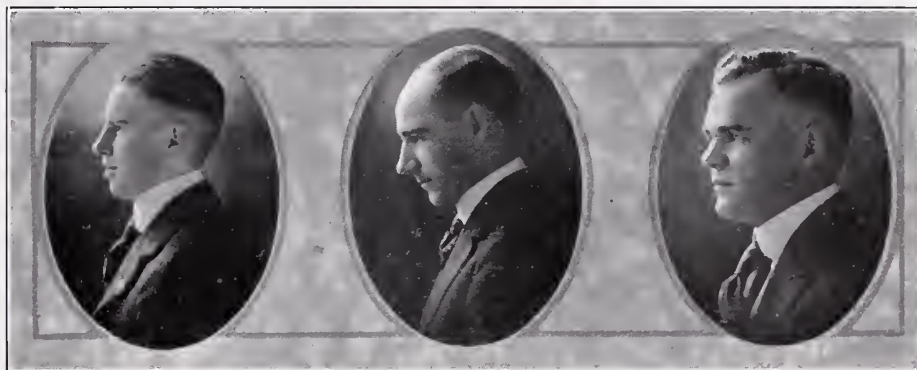

It happened that in the Fall of '16 there met a crew of thirty-seven young men who found that something was necessary for enlargement of life. They noted a change, a transition, that called upon them for a harmonious response. It was the change, the transition, from careless youth to careful manhood. Therefore in view of the change which was upon them and had to be met, these thirty-seven men waved a last goodby to their childhood days, which are still among the cherished recollections of the past.

Sailing, sailing on the river of Life, the crew anchor their boat and disembark into the quiet city of thought, which was cut off from the rest of the world by massive walls of the Law. For two years we have adorned the walls of this most profound seat of learning, and as we are nearing the time for another great change in life's current we find our hearts sad because of the loss of many members of the crew and a feeling that draws us to our "Alma Mater," but we must be going, and now that each has made for himself an individual boat in which to sail upon this stream of life, we say farewell to each other for the river bears us on. What has been done well will stand as a monument to our names; what has been done ill, a broken slab of dishonor, and thus we must leave behind our joys and griefs.

When we anchor next it will be to take the place of someone who has gone before, for the old are retiring and some have already thrown down their burden for a pillow upon which to rest their aching heads. The strong men of middle age are bending under great burdens; the plow of care is drawing deep its furrows over the faces, and the frost is beginning to fall upon their locks.

Dear classmates, let us not be unaware of what awaits us. Few, if any, of the realities of life have been seen and none of its responsibilities have been measured.

"OLE MISS"

History of Senior Medical Class

IN the Fall of '16 there was planted in the Medical Department of the University of Mississippi a mixed collection of organisms. The purpose was, of those who were sending this material here, to have cultivated by the processes of the different members of the medical faculty, a medical student, well versed and thoroughly drilled in the fundamental laboratory branches of medicine.

These protoplasmic masses were taken hold of by the different faculty members and planted on the various media of the different departments. By Dr. Leathers they were planted on the medium of "Histology," and their growth was carefully watched by him; the strains all adapted themselves well to this media, and at the end of the second term Dr. Leathers was able to say that each and every member possessed a very good knowledge of the subject. By Dr. Robinson, they were first placed on a media of bones, known in medicine as "Osteology." On this media all thrived fairly well, and the professor then decided on a richer medium of "Gross Anatomy," and on this media all adapted themselves, as only one or two strains failed to show the best of growth. During the spring term he used for cultivating them a media known as "Neurology." On this media most all strains showed peculiar reactions, but at the end of the term they were all turned loose, and Dr. Robinson asked that no more strains be planted.

Dr. Wollette in his department had several media, consisting of "Organic Chemistry," "Toxicology" and "Physiological Chemistry." On these media all the strains grew well, and the doctor called for no new transplants. Prof. Hisaw used for cultivation a media known as "Embryology." This media proved the most unfavorable of the year, but in the end only a few transplants were called for by the professor. At the end of the '16-'17 term the various faculty members got together and made a diagnosis, that as a finished Freshman Medical class they are recommended to have further examination next year in the media of the department.

Dr. DeGaris then took up the work of Dr. Robinson and finished taking observations of their growth on "Gross Anatomy," "Cross Section" and "Topographical Anatomy," and after a few months the professor was able to say that they had all thrived fairly well. Dr. Rowland then made use of his medias, "Materia Medica" and "Pharmacology," and he thinks that with careful cultivation he will be able to turn out a good growth. Dr. Guyton used in this department for growing media of "Bacteriology" and "Pathology," some peculiar reactions were shown, but Dr. Guyton thinks that by his careful methods of cultivation he will be able to produce good results. Dr. Crider's "Physiology" media brings out several peculiar idiosyncracies, but the doctor will be able to overcome those by his thorough methods. Another diagnosis was made by the faculty, and that was that these medias were now able to go away from "U. of M." as another Soph Medical class.

Along the halls and corridors of our dear old school the echo of footsteps of the Medical Class of '18 will be heard no more. Others will fill the gap almost as soon as it is made, all will tread the paths of lofty ideals, bringing new laurels, new hopes and new ambitions.

HISTORIAN.

"OLE MISS"

History of Senior Law Class

T last the Class of '18 has come to the turning of the lane, has completed long, strenuous years of earnest preparation for life's buffetings, and now, while the world is swathed in the smoke and fire of almost endless battle-fields, its members separate into the various avocations of life and become more actively "architects of fate." And on the eve of entering these new paths of existence, before finally turning away from college life and its associations, some account of the deeds of this class should be made.

But to him who would be so ambitious as to attempt this task comes at once the question: Which of the numerous achievements of these students shall be included in this memorial, which omitted? For, looking backward through the months and years of earnest endeavor, the eye is dazzled by a profusion of accomplishments whose brilliance is surpassing. And in truth, of such number and consequence are they that several volumes the size of this would be required were they adequately chronicled.

So the effort would be futile, and the historian is not so presumptuous as to attempt the delineation of those scenes and incidents which are so vividly and permanently imaged in the minds of his classmates. But the fame of this group of students will not suffer by this defection, and already the faculty is realizing that with the graduation of '18 "there has passed away a glory" from the school. Let the conduct of the members of this class but remain pitched upon the same high plane that it has occupied during these years, and no one of its own members will be called upon or needed to keep its memory green.

So let us conclude with some expression of the thoughts that fill our minds as, these last few times in the capacity of students, we gather on the athletic fields, in the classrooms, the dining halls, in chapel, and in the various activities of college life. It is not alone with anticipation that we view the coming years marked by the development and application of the powers cultivated here, but there is a certain sadness, which, however heartfelt, is not depression, that arises upon contemplation of the realizations and disappointments that have befallen us, the friendships and associations that have been formed, which, all, are as lasting as life itself. Memories of these halcyon days will often fill our reveries in the years that are to come.

"Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,
Tears from the depth of some divine despair
Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes,
In looking on the happy Autumn fields,
And thinking of the days that are no more."

History of the Engineers

No proposition Euclid wrote,
No formulae the textbooks know,
Will turn the bullet from your coat
Or ward the tulwar's downward blow.
—Kipling.

We are inclined to disagree with Mr. Kipling—in fact, we prefer to disagree with him—for it looks like war for the most of us—and after the years we have spent in the pursuit of the elusive formula—well, it would simply be what Sherman said war was to give serious attention to those lines. Ours has been no royal road to learning. For the past four years our path has not lain through the daisy fields where sweet singing birds or babbling brooks taught us our lessons. All that we know about babbling brooks we learned from Hydraulics; all that we know about songbirds we have learned from the music of Church and Malcolm and Turneure—and we leave it to the Class of '18 if that isn't some music. Assuredly ours has been no journey to Parnassus, for now that we are running our last contours around the summit of our education, we find no inspiring music or poetry to speed us on our way. All that we have to repay us for the trip is a plentiful supply of formulae, an abundant amount of theory, a fund of dry, scientific information—an education, in fact, which has more of truth than poetry in it, but which may enable us to at least add a little to the comfort of our fellows and bring one more smile to the face of the earth.

We are only five B.E.'s to be. We—"Pinkey" Bonney, "Double W." Dunn, "Ole Man" Simmons, "Honorary" McElroy, and "Jawn" Fontaine—have shared many more or less happy classroom hours and many other unquestionably happy experiences during our brief sojourn at Ole Miss. As all roads lead to Rome, so our paths, converging from many angles, led to Oxford. After graduation we will "hie us hence," after the fashion of engineers, to parts unknown and widely separated. We may meet again in the trenches and exchange a few reminiscences between shots. But wherever we may be, we will always be thinking of you—Ole Miss.

We shall always be grateful to Dr. Hume—to the nth power—for the wonderful things he taught us to do with math; to Dr. Dorroh for not being as hard as his reinforced concrete; to Prof. MacLeod for what we know of babbling brooks; to Dr. Kennon for the shocking things he taught us about electricity; and to Prof. Matthews for our perspective.

Who can tell what the future holds for us? No one knows. But whether it be war or business, "over the top, and the best of luck" is the parting message of your Historian.

"OLE MISS"

History of the Pharmacy Class

IN September, 1916, we became a part of the life of "Ole Miss" with an enrollment exceeding that of any Junior Class in Pharmacy in the history of the institution.

During the course of the year many of our number left us, some answering the call of the Nation, some the call of Cupid, and others no doubt "the call of the wild." Although this was our first year at the University, we took active part in all activities, and in academic work we were surpassed by none. We also did good work in athletics, furnishing three men for varsity baseball and one for scrub football.

Passing to our Senior year with a somewhat more dignified air, we again assumed our duties. Many of our number did not return, and as in the days of our fathers, there was a survival of the fittest. This year we had the honor of organizing "The University of Mississippi Pharmaceutical Association," an institution organized for the purpose of promoting the interests of our profession. In academic work we have met the requirements creditably; in athletics we stand on a par with the other classes of the institution.

We, as most Seniors, are looking with pride to the day when we will receive our diplomas for which we have labored so hard, but there will be mixed with that joy a sorrow. We realize that on that day we must part, perhaps never again to be united, and shall pass into the greater school, "The World," to share the responsibility with those who have gone before us.

"OLE MISS"

The Origin and the Growth of the A. S. B. O.

FROM the beginning of the opening session of the University of Mississippi, began activities within the student body and have continued unto the present day. These student activities of the various kinds that have existed here in years past were student activities, such as existed and do exist in all student bodies of universities and colleges. They grew up around and were manipulated through definite organizations of clubs and fraternities. The wishes and mind of the student body were expressed by means of these definite organizations. They were the framework of the student body. These groups largely controlled and looked after the interests and welfare of the members of their groups, pushing them forward and encouraging them to leadership when they needed to be encouraged, and restraining them when restraint was needed. For more than a half century, fraternities and club organizations stood as the framework or tent poles within the student body.

When, by the act of the Legislature of 1912, fraternities and secret club organizations were abolished by the University of Mississippi, the framework of the student body was removed. It stood in a tottering, unsupported and unsettled condition. The young alumni had become divided, athletics became disorganized, the Annual became disorganized, the weekly publication wasn't properly supported, interest in the literary societies became demoralized, even the Y. M. C. A. did not escape its effect. There were strong factional feelings and prejudices among the students toward each other. Student activities and organizations were left in a divided, disorganized and chaotic condition. There was left no organized way or definite channel through which the student body as a whole could express its wishes and desires in a clear, open and representative way. There existed within the student body a lack of co-operation towards anything—there being a general feeling of dissatisfaction and unrest. Men and women graduated from here feeling that there was something wrong somewhere. Some criticized the faculty; some knocked the good old institution, with its beautiful campus and grand and historic oaks, that had trained not only them, but in many instances their fathers and mothers before them; others felt like the grand old institution had gone to the dogs. Few, if any, really stopped and analyzed themselves and the true situation, and then tried to help reorganize things within and help boost and push back up the hill the institution that was such a large part of them, and that would largely shape their future. (If any of these men happen to see these feeble lines, will they stop and think a moment right here?) Such were conditions for two or three years. A change had to come.

With the coming of R. H. Legate to the University in the session of 1915-16, the Y. M. C. A. was taken from a chaotic condition and gradually reorganized, and has become well supported. In the spring of 1916, a small group of students, becoming interested in the improvement of the Mississippian, worked out a plan for its organization on a permanent business basis. It resulted in an improved publication and excellent support by the student body and University authorities. In the early part of the session of 1917-'18, a plan for the reorganization and putting of the Annual on a permanent and more businesslike basis was worked out and adopted.

Growing out of a misunderstanding between the student body and some of the officials of Oxford, it was definitely realized there was in existence no channel through which the student body as a whole could express its wishes and take concerted action when it was necessary to do so. If it tried to take action as a whole, there was no regular support for it to rest upon. It had been taken away in 1912.

As a result of this realization, there was submitted and adopted, in November, 1917, a plan for an associated student body organization, through which matters that were of interest and importance to the student body and University, and where concerted action was needed, could be brought up, discussed, deliberated upon and concerted action taken. The plan of this organization consists of four officers elected by the student body at large, viz., President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer; an advisory council consisting of the four officers, the presidents of the classes of the various departments in the University, and three additional members appointed by the President from the student body at large.

The first work of the A. S. B. O. was the organization of the moving picture show on the campus, which has since proven an entire success. The next step was the bringing about of the reorganization of the Athletic Association and putting it on an excellent, substantial and businesslike basis, such that it is meeting with the best support and co-operation of the faculty and student body that athletics has had in years. Had the A. S. B. O. stood for nothing more, these accomplishments made it more than worth while.

But happily it means a great deal more than the reorganization of the Y. M. C. A., the Mississippian, and the Annual. These have all been very good and important, but haven't and cannot take the place of the old framework that supported and consummated these activities for more than a half century.

The A. S. B. O. is the one thing that can be built up to take the place of that which has been removed, and form another framework for activities of the student body. The framework and foundation is laid for higher and bigger things within the University, and for it the future holds the organization of a general honor system, and eventually student government, such as exists in many of the larger universities of the country. It thus lays the foundation for the organization of a liver, a more effective and interested alumni, with a greater reverence for their Alma Mater and a keener interest for the University in the success of its alumni.

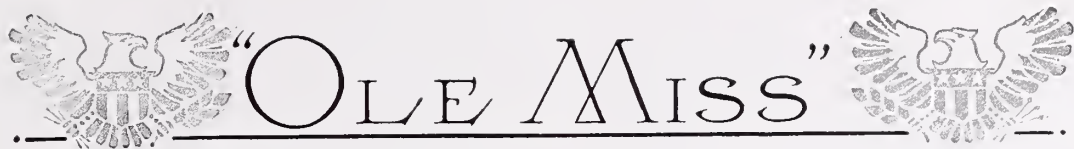

D. R. JOHNSON.

“OLE MISS”

Mississippi Ladies

Poor is the man indeed who has not at some time in his life become enamoured with at least one of God's fairest, most beautiful, most inspiring forms of creation—a lady. The very word brings to the mind of every true-blue Mississippian poetic and ennobling thoughts. The man whose heart has been purged of profane thoughts and has been warmed by the love of a Mississippi lady fair knows naught but springtime. He “feels a presence that chastens and subdues.” She seems to be God's chosen means of lifting men to the holy heights of purity, and goodness, and happiness. Without her the world would be as it was before our Father Adam met his affinity.

It would seem strange, indeed, if a book which attempts to lay bare the heart and soul of Ole Miss should not have within its own heart the pictures of at least a few of these wonderful creatures, for whom a Mississippian would give his all.

Well, here they are—ten or twelve of them—not even half so lovely as they are in reality, but still sweet, pure, beautiful, inspiring—Mississippi ladies!

"OLE MISS"

COACH C. R. NOBLE

Coach Noble

This is Coach C. R. Noble's first year at Ole Miss, but he has already entrenched himself deeply in the heart of the student body by his knowledge of athletics, his loyalty and faithfulness to duty. Coach Noble, during his college days, was one of the foremost athletes of the South. At Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College he made every athletic team put out by that institution for four years, being a shining star in football, basketball, baseball and track. In the fall of 1916 he went to Mississippi College as athletic instructor, and more than made good, turning out strong teams in every department. Last fall he came to Ole Miss as Coach, and with only material of unknown quality to work with, put out a strong, scrapping football team. With such a man at the baseball helm, and such a galaxy of promising players, it is certain that the team will be piloted through to a successful close.

"OLE MISS"

Review of the Season

THE football season of 1917 was an unsuccessful one in regard to the number of victories won, yet it was far from being a failure. Without a single "M" man around which to build a team, Coach Noble had to take a squad of green, inexperienced men and mold them into a co-ordinated, fighting machine. All this took time, and the season was almost ended before the Red and Blue struck its stride. But even with this great handicap, the team, under the expert generalship of Coach Noble, upheld the honor of Ole Miss on all occasions.

The first game of the season was with the Arkansas Agricultural College, and Ole Miss, being weaker than usual, the score was a bitterly contested 0-0 tie.

The Louisiana Tigers was the second team that Ole Miss tackled, but the latter was too strong, and when the final whistle blew the score was 52 to 7 in favor of L. S. U.

October 27 saw the Red and Blue at Tuscaloosa to battle against the "thin red line." Age, weight and experience were the victors, and Ole Miss was defeated, 52 to 0.

The following Saturday saw the Red and Blue battling bravely against A. and M. at Tupelo. Undismayed by the long string of defeats, and handicapped as they were, Ole Miss more than once almost snatched victory from the hands of her ancient rival. For the first time in seven years Ole Miss scored against the farmer lads, and though the score was 41 to 14 against them, they received the praise which their gallant fight, against such overwhelming odds, merited. Ole Miss scored more points against the farmer lads than any other team in the South did, showing that the Ole Miss boys were showing up very good on the offensive.

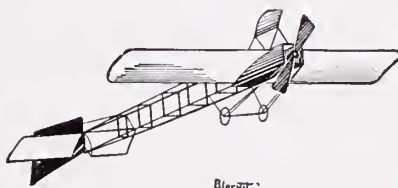

The lair of the mountain tiger, Sewanee, was next invaded, but to no avail, and the final result was 69 to 7, to Sewanee's credit.

The final and best game of the season was with Mississippi College—on Thanksgiving, at Jackson. The previous hard-fought contests had done their work, and the Collegians were easily defeated, 21 to 0.

Although Ole Miss won only one game out of six during the season, a steady improvement was shown, and a great fight put up in all these. What was at the beginning a bunch of undisciplined, inexperienced men became husky, formidable antagonists before the season ended. Despite the lack of victories, we feel that the season has not been a failure, and that the men who fought for Ole Miss gave their all, and we honor them for it. Hats off to our team and to our coach, for, through their efforts, we feel that Ole Miss has broken loose from the past, and will in the future enter upon a series of successful seasons.

“OLE MISS”

"OLE MISS"

COACH NOBLE took hold of the Ole Miss eleven for the first time this season, and he has more than made good. He thoroughly understands the art of handling men and knows how to make the most of green material. May he be with us many seasons yet to come.

CAPTAIN ROY BRIDGES is the heady quarter who piloted the team during the past season. He is a hard driver, and his smashing off tackle bucks have counted many gains for Ole Miss. Roy was ineligible last season, but worked faithfully as coach of the scrubs. As a reward for his merit he was chosen captain this season.

WILL FIGFORD showed himself to be a football manager of the first water during the past season. His handling of the intricate problem of finances was more than adequate, and due to his expert management, the team financially came out successfully.

"OLE MISS"

JACK BIRCHETT managed the scrubs in fine shape this season. He always managed to save money for the association, because he caught early morning trains, saving lodging fares, and succeeded in convincing the scrubs that they did not have to eat as much as the varsity.

"GOAT" ROWAN is a steady player and good passer. At center he performed in his stellar role. "Goat" always keeps his head, and with his weight is a valuable man to the team.

SQUIRE MAYFIELD came to us from the State Normal College at Hattiesburg, where he had been acting in the capacity of coach. Squire is a man of some avoirdupois, and whether in the backfield or in the line, is a most dependable man.

DOCTOR BOOKOUT, like most of his teammates, enjoyed his first year on the varsity. He is a steady, consistent player, with the drive behind him which is hard to stop. Whether at quarter or at half, he is always good.

"OLE MISS"

"Sis" COWART, another first year man, held down his position at end in a very satisfactory manner. Although light, he is fast and heady, and could always be depended on to perform in a creditable manner.

"SANDY" SIMMONS, although a first year man, tore up things around his end this season. Though light, he is a hard, gritty player. Here's hoping that he may be with us several more seasons.

HUBERT McELROY is a consistent player at end, and at half. Wherever he is, he more than fills his place, and performs to the satisfaction of all.

ALONZO GEORGE performed at guard this season, and proved himself a most formidable man in the line. He is a hard fighter, always on his toes, and ready to go. He is another first year man of whom we are expecting great things next season.

"OLE MISS"

"SPEEDY" JIGGITS, although a first year man, proved himself to be one of the fastest, most reliable men on the team. At half, he frequently pulled off spectacular runs, and could always be relied upon for a gain.

FRESHMAN TUBB is a first year man at Ole Miss, but, despite his inexperience, made an excellent showing. He is heavy, always ready to go, and with his added experience should make a most valuable man next season.

"DICK" FIELD is another speed merchant who performed at half. He is always on the job, and one of the hardest men on the team to stop. When Dick has the ball, a good gain is assured.

"SLIM" SUMNERS is another hard man to stop in the line. At tackle he is a steady player and one to be reckoned with.

"OLE MISS"

CHIEF BAGWELL is another hard fighter. At tackle he has developed into one of the most consistent, dependable men in the line.

"DOC" SISLER'S work at full has been indispensable this season. He is fast, with great driving power behind him, and showed up prominently in every game he played.

"RED" RAY came to us this season from Auburn. At center he has proven his true worth, and is a steady, accurate passer. "Red" is every inch a fighter, and with added weight next year should prove a power in the line.

"HANDSOME" WHITTEN from Memphis is a man who can play football as well as win maidens' hearts, and can always be counted on to do his part. He is not spectacular, but consistent, nor forward, but reserved, in all that he does.

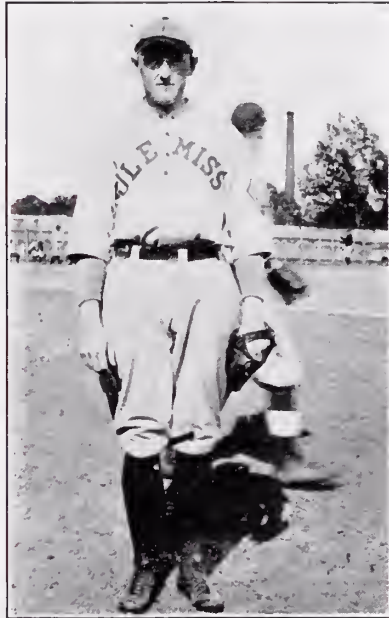

"OLE MISS"

Scrub Team

THE SCRUBS did great work throughout the season. They took to their work with a snap and a vim, which promises well for future seasons. Not content with outplaying the varsity on a few occasions, they proceeded to go through the season without the loss of a single game. The first contest was a hard-fought 0-0 tie with Oxford Hi. Next, Greenwood was tackled and fell a victim by the score of 26 to 13. As a climax, the invincible Yazoo City All-Star team was downed, 13 to 0. 'Rah for the Scrubs! Without a single defeat on their record, and two notable victories, they stand convicted of having done well their bit for Ole Miss.

"OLE MISS"

Captain Fields

For several years Ole Miss has selected her captains from among the members of the pitching staff, and this year proved to be no exception, when Dick Fields was chosen to lead her fortunes on the diamond. No better qualified man could have been selected. Dick has always ranked in the forefront as a moundsman, and is an ideal man to lead Ole Miss on to victory. He is quiet and unassuming, very popular among his teammates, and can always be depended on to keep his head at a crucial moment. This, coupled with his experience and knowledge of the game, makes him an ideal man to head the team for the coming season.

"OLE MISS"

The Baseball Outlook for 1918

THE baseball season has hardly begun, and it is entirely too early to venture a prediction, yet it is evident already that Ole Miss will be represented on the diamond by a fairly strong ball club. The first game of the schedule is yet some weeks off, and though this game is expected to show up whatever weaknesses the Ole Miss aggregation may possess, it is not to be especially dreaded.

The season will open with two games on the local diamond, against the University of Illinois. After Illinois comes Millsaps, Mississippi College, and A. & M., none of whom are expected to be especially dangerous.

The opening of practice revealed only seven men of the twenty-two members of the 1917 varsity squad. Around these seven men—Fields, Bridges, Moseley, Sisk, Dunn, McCain and Farmer—Coach Noble is laboring to build a smooth-working, well-balanced team. Bethea and O'Mara are sadly missed as receivers, but Coach Noble has three good men for this position in Bridges, Hagerman and Hathorn. The absence of D. W. Holmes and Hank Kyle may not be so keenly noticed, as there are such men as Benton, Holmes, Bostick, Caldwell and Sparks out for this position besides Fields, and Moseley, of last year's pitching staff. Both the outfield and infield suffered heavily from losses of last year's men, Sisk, Dunn, McCain and Farmer being the only old varsity men showing up at these positions. Although there is a bunch of green material to work with, under these conditions it is no easy task Coach Noble faces. A team of individual stars can hardly be hoped for, and our chances of winning depend upon putting out a well-balanced team, working together as a single unit. But under the direction of so able an instructor as Coach Noble, and with plenty of good material, the present outlook seems bright and alluring, and we feel safe in saying that the baseball team put out by Ole Miss for 1918 will be a successful one.

“The Rivals”

FRITZ MUELLER felt a vague uneasiness as he walked along Broadway. He had felt that way ever since arising. To begin with, the weather was rather uncertain. The sky was leaden. A little rain had fallen during the night, and the sidewalks were wet underfoot. Occasionally a crowd might be seen gathered around some poor horse that had fallen on the slippery asphalt and was struggling to rise under the none too gentle persuasion of its driver.

A brisk walk of a few minutes brought him to the entrance of the Alt Nuremberg Cafe, where he was the leader of a five-piece orchestra. The exterior of the Alt Nuremberg was not at all imposing. It was a rathskeller—one of those little restaurants tucked away in the basement, where the guests think more of talking than they do of dining. Inside, it was cozy and clean. The host's welcome was as wholesome as the food. The walls were covered with dark oaken carvings of German heads and mottoes. The twenty or more tables were dressed in spotless linen, and the floor was spread with clean sawdust.

Fritz tripped lightly down the flight of stone steps that led to the basement, and entered. A waiter greeted him pleasantly and took his hat, coat and umbrella. At the far end of the room a cheerful blaze was lazily climbing the chimney of the big, open fireplace. Pausing often to chat with friendly waiters, Fritz finally made his way to the fire and spread his fat little person in front of it.

By one of those strange accidents that often happen in cosmopolitan cities, the proprietor of this German restaurant was a big, healthy Irishman, whose name was Jim Muldoon. He came across and greeted Fritz warmly: "Well, Fritz! How goes it today?"

"Ver' goot, thanks!" Fritz replied, and continued to expose himself to the blaze.

"What's new in the world, Fritz?" continued Muldoon. "Anything going on outside today?"

"Nix," Fritz answered, "only water. We haf a rain. Vere iss Rosie?" Rosie was Muldoon's daughter, and the cashier of the establishment.

"Aw, she'll be here in a minute. She's just primpin' a bit before she comes in to see you!" Muldoon laughed.

Almost at that moment the swinging doors of the kitchen opened and Rosie burst into the room, smiling and happy. She was a beauty of eighteen or twenty, with a splendid figure, pure complexion and rich, brown hair.

"Good morning, Fritzie," she said in a sweet, full-throated tone.

"Hello, Rosie," Fritz replied. "Gee, you iss pretty today!" And he squeezed her hand tenderly.

"Aw, now, Fritz, none of your blarney," she said, and slipped away to the cashier's desk, where she began to arrange things in a mechanical way, looking at her German lover half the time. Fritz looked up and caught her eye, then they both looked at the floor, and blushed crimson. They were in love, and knew it well. But Fritz simply could not muster enough courage to propose.

"OLE MISS"

His pleasant thoughts were interrupted by the arrival of his fellow musicians, and the little orchestra soon began to play to the late breakfast crowd. Waltzes, fox trots and one steps and, once during each meal, "The Watch on the Rhine," Fritz and his orchestra played for the half German, half cosmopolitan audience.

At eleven o'clock the musicians usually took an intermission that lasted for an hour. Fritz and Rosie were seated, according to their daily custom, in a little booth in one corner of the cafe. They had ordered lunch, and were waiting.

"Rosie," Fritz said, "I haff something to tell you, but I chust can't get id oudt."

"Aw, come on, Fritz—be a man," Rosie said, laughing a bit nervously.

"Well," Fritz answered, after some hesitation, "I will! I luf you, Rosie, und I want you to be my wife."

"Aw, Fritzie!" was all that Rose could say, and she nestled into his arms, laughing softly.

Fritz was kissing her when Jim Muldoon entered. Rose looked up and blushed. "Father," she said, simply, "Fritz and I are engaged."

"Congratulations, Fritz!" Jim said, good-naturedly slapping his future son-in-law on the back with his big paw. Turning, he shouted to a passing waiter: "Hey, Joe, let's have a bottle of champagne here, quick!"

At noon Rosie wore a sparkling new ring, and the merry frequenters of her father's cafe drank health and happiness to the lovers. There were scores of shouts to the orchestra for "Here Comes the Bride," which Fritz, although handicapped by embarrassment, played accommodatingly and well. It was a very happy hour.

But, in the midst of the meal, a newsboy ran among the tables, shouting: "Extry! Extry! England declares war on Germany! French soldiers are fighting!"

The engaged couple was forgotten. The soldiers at the tables cheered a little and fell to telling how Germany was going to do the business. There were many Frenchmen, Englishmen and Irishmen in the crowd, and arguments were plentiful. The controversies would cool down in one spot, only to become hotter than ever in others. And all the time Jim Muldoon kept circulating, like water in a radiator, cooling the speakers wherever he went. He held a large Russian while a small German made his escape, and when Fritz began to play "The Watch on the Rhine," commanded him to play "The Marseillaise" and "God Save the King," in rapid succession. Thus the anger of the diners was appeased.

That evening several of Fritz's former comrades drifted in to dinner, gay, happy and boisterous. They forced Fritz to drink in honor of the fatherland, until he could scarcely navigate. He staggered home at eleven o'clock, with all sails set. He was as drunk as a crow in wild cherry time. He went to bed fully dressed in his little room, which reeked with the odor of stale tobacco and dirty clothes.

“OLE MISS”

When he awoke it was nine o'clock in the morning. He had all the symptoms of "the morning after" illnesses, but Rosie came to him out of the mist that slowly lifted from his brain. He had set today as the day of days, when he and Rosie would select the furniture for their home. He had saved a thousand dollars, and it was now reposing in the Hibernian Savings Bank—recommended by Muldoon—and he would draw part of it and call at the cafe for Rosie.

He dressed hastily and rushed to the Alt Nuremberg. A few customers, mostly French and Irish, were there. A few Germans, who were answering the call of the fatherland, dropped in to tell Muldoon good-by. Fritz bade them farewell very solemnly, and asked for Rosie. She would not be down that morning, Big Jim told him, as she was ill.

So Fritz, feeling very lonesome and blue, sat down and ordered a stein. A messenger entered with a telegram for Mr. Mueller. Fritz took it, signed where the boy indicated, and broke the envelope. The message ordered him to report at once to the German consul in San Francisco. He showed the wire to Muldoon and got leave for a week.

On the way to his apartment, he stopped at a German book store and purchased a framed picture of Von Hindenburg, which he hung over the bed in his stuffy little room. He wrote Rose a comforting little note and sent her some violets that he had bought from a street florist. He promised to return in a week, and that they would be married then.

He was absent not more than five days. But in those few days what a change had taken place in the world! The name of St. Petersburg had been changed to Petrograd, and the Alt Nuremberg was no longer known by that name, but, in large green letters, on the windows was painted, "Tipperary Tavern."

Fritz could hardly believe his senses, and rubbed his eyes. He cautiously opened the door and peered in, expecting to find himself in a strange place. But the carved heads were still staring down from their places on the walls, and the same old German mottoes were there. Catching sight of the familiar back of Jim Muldoon, he entered. Jim was seated at a table engaged in conversation with several Englishmen. The Englishmen glanced up as he approached, and began to talk in lower tones. Fritz felt that he was not welcome in the party, and went over to the cashier's booth. A pretty little girl was in Rose's accustomed place. In response to Fritz's question, she said: "Rosie's got nervous prostration, or something. The doctor ordered her to go to the mountains for a month. She's gone to Idylwild. I'm Nora Stokes. Don't you remember me?"

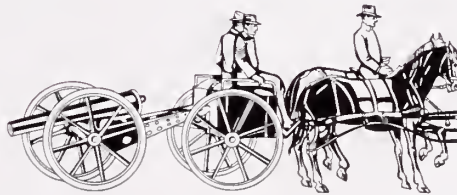

The poor boy murmured something in reply and stumbled out into the cold, misty atmosphere. He made his way home and sat down to think. The consul had told him that he might do as he pleased about going back to Germany, but he was in a quandary. If Rosie had been there, she might have helped him to decide. But as it was, Von Hindenburg had it alone. Fritz looked long at the stern countenance of his old commander, and sat down to write Rose a long letter. He told her that his love for the fatherland was greater than his love for her.

“OLE MISS”

He packed his few belongings, including his violin. He next drew his savings from the Hibernian Bank and bought a steamer ticket for Tsing Tau. He had one chance in a hundred of reaching Germany by this route, so the consul had told him, and he resolved to try it. His boat—the last one for many weeks to come—was leaving San Pedro that afternoon, so he could not spare the time to tell Rose Muldoon good-bye.

As the long white liner swung out into the harbor, a chorus of whistles bade her farewell. The figure of a fat little man could be seen on the upper deck. He was waving a pocket handkerchief with all his might. A pretty girl rushed from a beach car out upon the dock and waved frantically in return. She continued to wave mechanically even when the vessel was out of sight in the fog. When she at last turned away someone remarked that she was weeping.

“Dante’s Inferno” (Completely Revised)

I dreamed a dream the other night—
It made me laugh with glee;
For the scene laid out before my eyes
Furnished unbounded joy to me.

I found myself in the bottomless pit,
Some thousand feet below—
But Satan knew not that I was there—
Undisturbed, I beheld the show.

The “Old Scratch” was much too busy
To pay me any heed,
For there, in a brimstone office,
Joe Powers was making some speed.

An imp outside the office,
By whirling him on a fork,
Was showing poor Willie Kennon
New ways of describing a torque.

I could hardly keep from shouting
When, down in the grate below,
Little Allie begged a holiday;
The imps sternly said: “No!”

Grandma Torrey, in anguish, listened
To a fresh imp with a goad:
“Say ‘Seven times eight is fifty-six,
‘Cause the old cow crosses the road!’”

Driving on thru the hottest fire—
Enveloped in whitest heat—
Old Bondy was steering the Buick
Old Horace held down the rear seat.

A train loaded with boiling gravy
Came rushing madly thru Hell;
The cars were labeled “Pontotoc,”
Engineered by Uncle Jim Bell.

That I saw the whole —— faculty
You have, no doubt, concluded;
But, lest you o’erlook, I’ll simply add,
Lemmie was also included.

BILLUPS

General Billups, generalissimo, is absolutely the rarest of the entire collection. It is understood that from infancy he has had Mars as a constant playmate. In connection with his truculent and bellicose proclivities, some authorities think they can trace in him the evolution of the race—especially if the missing link were a chameleon, as some maintain. He is very much like such an animal in his changeable qualities. Besides being general of the University military forces, he is also rear admiral—when it rains—with special emphasis on the rear.

BASINGER

Professor Basinger, umbrella and all, was found in Gulfport, and authorities, not being able to determine his species, assigned him to the Faculty as the closest resemblance. And, truthfully enough, this remarkable animal has some traits in common with some members of the Faculty. He can make a gas attack and fascinate the coop. But, my! you should see him eat—but here the author must desist and apply the board of censorship.

BREWER

This is a life-size likeness of "Shoots" Brewer. He has been here for only one year, during which his presence has been heard—not seen. Yet 'tis rumored that he draws a princely royalty from Arm & Hammer Co. for the privilege of using the picture of his arm on their soda packages. To approximately cover this subject, the sketch must be exceedingly brief—Amen.

CLEVELAND

Grover wasn't the only one to make the name Cleveland famous. Look at this guy who put the me in ameba and paramecium. Although he's a great botanist and knows that bushes usually becme trees, yet he is hopeful enough to expect one Bush to become a Cleveland. He has discovered why hens cackle and roosters crow, and claims to have established his kinship with the monkeys—it is an open secret that the photographer furnished him with the necessary proof.

HESTER

We got this specimen out of Sullivan's Hollow, but all the professors in Christendom can't get the "hollow" out of his head. Therefore, he is called "Irresistible" Hester. Without the least compassion to our feelings in the matter, he abruptly appeared among us four years ago, and we have had to bear him these many years. Accordingly he is known as "Unmerciful." We know his picture is irresistibly comical, so turn your eyes away before you laugh unmercifully.

HOUSTON

This would-be wonderful animal sleeps at all times of the day, will not stir for breakfast. He learned two years ago to eat anything fed to the animals; makes much show of his disgust when he drinks water; prefers to go untidy and will embarrass ladies unless avoided.

"OLE MISS"

KLINGMAN

Here is another of our specimens—Sleeping Beauty Klingman. He has two distinguishing characteristics, viz., he has the distinction of never having missed a note in his vespers, and has never been to breakfast on time since his captivity. Also, the fact that he keeps close company with Morpheus may explain why he has been subjected to Fresh. Latin for the past four years.

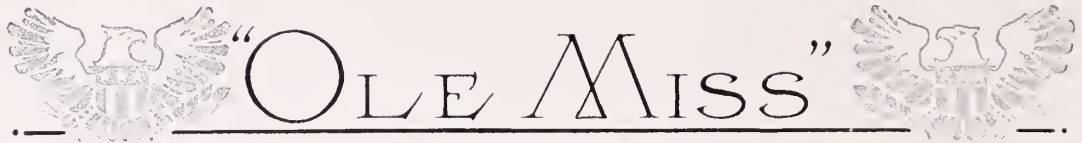

NEWSOM

"Brainless Wonder" Newsom. This is absolutely the most wonderful animal of the entire collection. This animal does not use or need a brain, and it is said that he seems none the worse off from it. Once he broke loose, and his keepers found him ranging at large at Mississippi College. The most interesting of his numerous peculiarities is that he lives entirely off of Sloan's Liniment.

PIGFORD, YAWN

This is our comedy—featuring "Feet" by Tar Baby Yawn, and for once in his life, "My son Willie" has big prospects in front of him. Both claim Lumberton as their home, and, without doubt, a ton of lumber was used in constructing their domes—human hatracks. Henry's voice is envied by every jaybird on the campus, and his future will be devoted either to singing or Sing Sing. Willie is a musician, being able to play the "liar" with the easy grace of a born artist, and without the slightest effort. He is also an orator and soars and soars till he makes the audience sore.

Jokes

All our jokes are so old they now hold professorships, and we call them “doctors.” They have grown funnier with age, and sometimes we laugh at them so that they “bust” us. The censor won’t let us tell you the facts about them, but you can see diagrams of them by looking in the front of this book. If we were to omit “C-in” our dear faculty, we would characterize them as they are, but this is the day of camouflage, so we are determined not to be behind the times. “C” them!

HEPI TAXOYΣ.

A tortoise almost ran over me, a snail and her family darted by, a frog running from Lemmie Cleveland catapulted past, I looked up just in time to see Dr. Bondurant whiz by in his “Buickibus,” going at least 600,000 inches an hour. Speed? Well, I should snort! But then I thought of our snappy chapel programs, of our short and quickly finished exams, and how soon the papers are graded and returned. I thought of a certain Faculty-Senior baseball game in which I saw a ball bound nearly out of the infield when propelled by one hundred and ninety-eight pounds of old Pontotoc bone, brawn, bluster and alas! nothing more; and I realized how far wrong Dr. Kennon was when he said that the occultation of a star by the moon was the only instantaneous act, for on the spur of the moment I recalled these:

Saying “good night” at 11:50 by “Choppy.”

Postmaster Johnson reading a constitution.

English B excused on time by Dr. Bishop.

Eating breakfast in one minute and eight seconds by Dr. Kennon.

Dr. Hedleston coming from the golf links.

(AUTHOR’S NOTE—This was written in such a burst of speed that my close flew up near the top, hence the brevity.)

MEASLES CLAIMS ANOTHER VICTIM

ONE OF OUR FAIREST FLOWERS
SUCCUMBS TO FELL DISEASE.

It was with moist eyes and saddened hearts that we learned this morning that Miss Gertrude Lassiter had been caught in the dread clutches of the Pink Peril. Like a thief, it came in the night and laid its sinister mark on her brow, and ere an hour had passed, ere our coffee was cold in our cups, she had joined the ranks of the Measly Mutts and was as rank as any of them. Come back soon, Gertrude; we miss you. Your presence would put an entirely different complexion on the matter.

THE LAZY LASSES GO TO THE GYM

With their shrinking forms clad in coats and skirts, the young people of the community reluctantly wended their way to the REST ROOM (what a hollow mockery!) and for forty-five weary minutes bent and twisted and stooped and rolled and romped and jumped and genuflected under the stern combined tutelage of Mrs. Nobles and Miss Word. With a haunted look in their young eyes, they returned the same way that the plowman did.

Tonight at the witching hour of six a merry bevy of gay, but determined, young ladies proceeded to the RE-factory, and there so successfully attacked the food that victory was theirs almost before they themselves realized it. As they marched out someone was heard chanting, "We have met the biscuits and they are ours."

Said Essie, a young Miss Imperial,

With notions in dress quite ethereal:

She didn't; 'twas quite immaterial.

SPIRIT OF GLOOM OVER COMMUNITY

TENSE NERVES TAUT UNDER UN-

When the hands of the clock in the Hall pointed to the hour of seven, like a cloud over the sunny fields in May, a pall of gloom settled over the members of our community, and an intense stillness pervaded the atmosphere. We clasped our head feverishly with our hands, and there discovered an idea that solved the solemn mystery—study hour had begun.

EDITORIAL

As we go to press we are informed by our reporters of several juicy bits which should have gone in this, our first edition. But time is more to an editor than it is to a porker, and we find ourselves unable to include several stirring accounts which the public is entitled to know. On this, our maiden voyage on the unknown and trackless sea of editorship, we do not hesitate to start fearlessly in perfect trust of our compass, which is Right, and in blissful confidence of our Captain, who is Truth. We do not care for Public Opinion, and we will bravely and fearlessly speak out for R-r-r-right at any cost. We will put one foot upon the neck of the monster W-r-i-r-rong and O-p-p-p-p-pression. Wishing our readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, we beg to remain,

ANSWERS TO OUR CORRESPONDENTS' QUESTIONS

Hosford—Will going without breakfast on Sunday morning reduce my weight?

Ans.—No, I do not think it will reduce you appreciably. Try anti-fat.

Coralie—Does calomel injure the skin?

Ans.—On the contrary, a generous portion of liquid calomel rubbed into the skin with a rotary motion thrice daily will nourish and preserve the complexion.

Answer to "Cutie" — No, dearie, dipping the eyes in Wesson oil will not make your lashes grow.

Answer to Blue Eyes—The best method I know of beautifying the eyebrows, and one much practiced and favored by my correspondents, is the following: Pull them out with tweezers three times daily after meals, and just before retiring at night. Also, if you do not see an immediate improvement, when you rise in the morning you might yank a few. Bandage a towel firmly around your eyes to absorb the tears.

The hymns selected this evening were "Onward, Christian Soldiers" and one or two other martial airs, concluding with "The Fight Is On."

Questions relating to Health or Beauty answered free of charge by Ima Looker, beauticultural expert. (International News Agency.)

Now that Spring is here with its wind and sun, so destructive to the delicate epidermis, freckles and tan, those twin evils, and bugbears of the Beauty-Seeker, are sure to cause havoc if care is not exercised in time. An idea has come to us from overseas which is likely to prove invaluable to the great body of American women. Like so many of the ideas which have proved such valuable and material aids in the preservation of the style and chic of American femininity, it comes from the trenches. Briefly, it is this: Secure a gas mask from a home-coming soldier, and wear it faithfully whenever you go out. In two or three months your complexion will show a marked improvement, and will have that dead-white appearance so much desired by all.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR

The time has come to strike a blow for our rights, and all of you who have a speck of manhood rise in your large white cravats and join in the fray. In these times which try men's souls, to say nothing of women's; in this, the crucial moment, let us marshal our forces and take an inventory of our assets. Among those conspicuous by their absence is one without which we are as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals; without which we are as the beasts of the field; I speak of that divine attribute, that spiritual grace, that blossom of infinitude which the poet has ranked next to godliness—I speak of a tub-once-a-day. Can we get it? No! Can we have one as often as every Saturday night? Perhaps. How long, O Lord? Rise and demand hot water, my daughters! Selah.

“OLE MISS”

A Prof's Mss.

This is a thesis submitted for a degree at Helluva College, of Reno. It is easily seen by the language used that the author already holds a Bachelor's degree, and so this must be for original research. It was intended to be spoken, but the writer, fearing that his head might be in a similar condition to Mr. McElroy's, turned it in to the Annual for publication.

We have no way of telling who the writer is, unless by references in the thesis itself. In it we notice no little amount of history, but can we, I say—can we believe it emanated from the history department? Ask Ricks Hall. Here goes:

I think it was the grandfather of Diogenes who made the sage remark that girls are a necessary evil, but if Diogenes didn't have a grandfather, or if he didn't make the statement, I take the responsibility upon myself. The average girl attends boarding school just because it is the fashionable thing to do. She promptly purchases the requisite books, which she reverently places in the bottom of her trunk and, with vestal fidelity, guards against the profanation of a touch or look.

She spends part of her time discoursing about beaux and clothes, and the rest of it in writing letters which contain one idea to every three epistles.

Usually she groups in history (always if the teacher is unmarried), and, while her information is rather vague, she is quite sure that the Thirty Years' War lasted eighteen months, that Lafayette was a Seminole chief, while John Adams was father of the express business. She is interested in astronomy, and through the telescope woos the man in the moon. Her observation of it could well be entitled, "Luna viewed by looney."

In the course of time she completes her course, and on Commencement Day, clad like a saint and plastered with paint, she reads a paper on "True Womanhood," or "The Advantages of an Education," and, notwithstanding the fact that she knows nothing of either or of anything save foolishness, she will captivate the heart of every gosling in the audience.

The "sweet girl graduate" now enters the swirl of society, and her real usefulness is well summed up in the two last figures of "the 400."

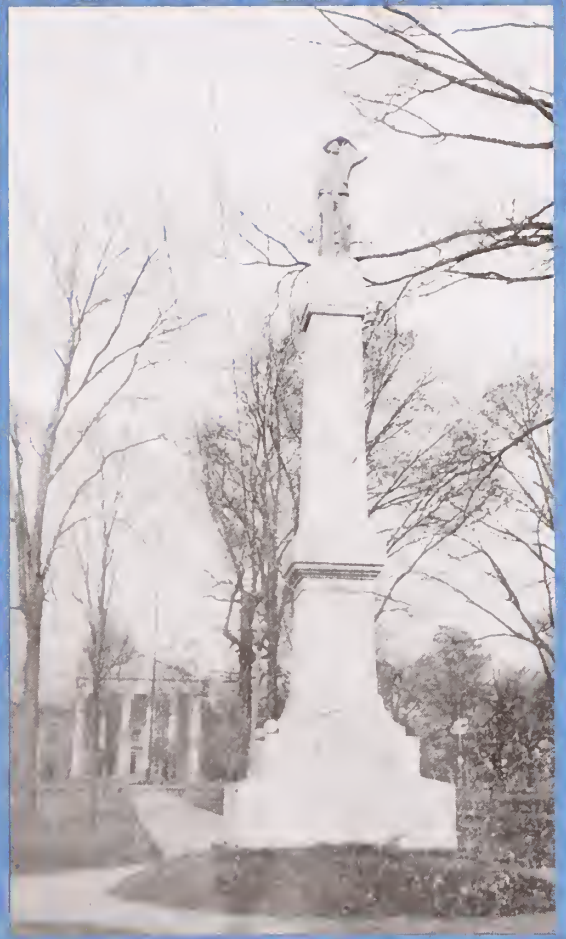

If Darwin had seen her monkey-shines, he would have cried "Eureka!" (I have found it), meaning, of course, the missing link. She dances six nights out of every week, wears dresses too brief at both ends, and refuses to be civilized. As fools are made in pairs, she finds her counterpart, and then what a wife she makes! The true wife may reprove her husband when he spills coal all over the Brussels carpet, but how much better that is than to knock him down and punch out his eyes with the poker! What a sweet relief the Bible must hold out for her poor husband when it says, "Man and wife shall not know each other in heaven!"

"OLE MISS"

In conclusion, I wish to say that, after my own, there is no sex 'neath the starry canopy of the azure heavens, north, east, south or west, in air, earth or water that I adore more than your own, and I hope that, with Cupid's golden arrow, you will each slay a man and devote your energies to the amelioration of the human race.

PRACTICALLY all of the men named in the following pages are volunteers. Much of the data in regard to them was collected in January and February, 1918—some in March. While every possible effort was made to prepare a complete and accurate list, it is a matter of genuine regret that all could not be reached. The difficulties incident to such an undertaking will at once occur to anyone who considers the limited time, the wide areas to be covered, the frequent changes of addresses, the unsettled conditions, etc.

It being the purpose of the compiler of these statistics to continue the work, he will welcome corrections and additional facts which will help later in the preparation of a full and thoroughly reliable record for the University archives.

In working on this brief chapter in the University's history, the writer has felt peculiarly privileged in being admitted to holy places in the hearts and homes of hundreds of parents, the names of whose sons are given here. He has handled with reverent touch many letters from fathers and mothers speaking with proud paths of their boys in the camps, on the seas, or "over there," and showing strong and deep parental love, which, so far from seeking to withhold its best, gave with lavish hand and a spirit of willing and determined sacrifice. Many of the pictures entrusted to him for a season bore evident marks of woman's hands, wrapped with that care and tied with that tenderness which told in unmistakable terms of the undying devotion of the mothers of men.

"OLE MISS"

DEDICATION

THIS volume has been dedicated to the sons of "Ole Miss" who have freely offered their services and, if need be, life itself, to defend the splendid principles for which our country stands in the world war now raging. The brothers of these soldier boys still lingering in the old halls and treading the campus paths alone, would pay them this simple tribute of heartfelt and unstinted praise for patriotism promptly displayed in severing family ties, leaving firesides, shouldering burdens, laying personal pleasures, important business and proper ambitions on humanity's altar, willingly and gladly exchanging peaceful pursuits for the perils and hardships of camp and battlefield, in order to uphold worthy traditions and national honor, to preserve the priceless heritage of a liberty-loving people, and to demand that womanhood be respected, childhood protected, home hallowed, and human rights of every kind held inviolable.

Our hats are off to these boys—these men! Our heads are bared as we see them march proudly away! Our hearts are bowed as we fondly call their names, and our hands reach out to clasp them once again as they go from us—eager, determined and unafraid!

Bright be the pages which tell the deathless story of their deeds side by side with the glorious record of the University Grays! Sprung from the very womb of war, born of one mother, cradled amid the storm, in their manhood now they bear upon their brows her name, and her fair fame is forever safe in their keeping.

APPRECIATION

Before sounding taps upon this section, we wish to acknowledge our gratitude and appreciation to those who made the publication of the Military Section possible. We desire to thank Chancellor Powers and the Board of Trustees for their interest and financial support. Also we especially wish to express our appreciation to Dr. Hume, who, as a volunteer, spent many hours of hard work in collecting the pictures and compiling and arranging the data which compose this section, for without his support we could not have presented a section half so interesting and complete.
